NEWS OF OTHER TOWNS

Deferred from last week.

Notes of Hocking Oyhidia

Thinking that some of the readers of the DEMOCRAT SENTINEL would appreciate what I am going to relate, I send it to your paper. Senator Coble knows of a snake living near the Hocking river that if any one will just touch it it will die, but mine are not of that nature.

A few years ago near Gibsonville I killed a snake of the boscus constructor species measuring five feet in length, it having swallowed his brother, Ophidia, and he being over three feet in length.

At another time I captured a snake of the species triangular ophibolus it having swallowed one of the common flying bats, that certainly is a freak of nature when we consider how spreading are a bats wings, but his snakeship had overcome that difficulty.

George Snider, of Logan, knows of a snake swallowing a young ground hog the operation proving fatal not only to Mr. ground hog but to Mr. Snake also.

While engaged in teaching at my present location I had the opportunity of capturing a boscus constructor that was swollen at a point halfway between his tail and head to at least four times his natural diameter, on cutting the snake in two near the place of the enlarged part in the same stroke cut off a large rat's tail which proved to be the cause of the snake's enlargement.

One day in last September while visiting at the home of Harvey Bowers, near Heshborough, the writer captured a large black snake at least as long as the writer is high, and having quieted the snake down proceeded to place him in a common coffee sack when taking advantage of his opportunity this ophidium sent his teeth into the palm of the hand of the writer with all his force. The writer then said his prayers and called a doctor, of Logan, who rendered medical aid and helped the wound given by Mr. snake to heal; after three weeks I extracted two of that snake's teeth from my hand and am still alive proving to you that black snakes are nonpoisonous.

In conclusion would say that I will write no more snake stories this year unless solicited.

Obituary.

How true the words, "In the midst of life we are in death." Here today in the bloom of life, health and strength, tomorrow cold in death. The Lord's ways are not our ways. He knows the jewels He wishes to gather. He knows what is best for man's good. We must submit our entire will to Him, who knows all things and does all things best.

In this case He plucked the tender bud from off this cold earth to bloom in heaven; to make heaven shine with the radiant bloom of his youth. Freddie P. Tucker, the subject of this obituary, was born February 10, 1901, departed this life October 25, 1907, aged 6 years, 8 months and 15 days. He leaves to mourn a father, mother, 3 brothers, 4 sisters, a grandmother and a host of friends. Freddie was gentle, playful and ready to obey.

We will miss Freddie, his presence, his little prattling tongue, his playful feet, his ever presence with us, but we must not weep, for Freddie is at his home, with Father and the angels in heaven. A far better home than any human hand can supply. His suffering on earth was short, but a few brief moments, but his joy and bliss will be eternal. Sad to lose him so sudden, out of youth, out of play unto death. But 'twas God's way. Weep not, Freddie is in heaven looking out for us to come. He is dwelling with God and the angels; our loss is heaven's gain.

Freddie never retired to his little cot of slumber until he said his little prayer taught him by his mother. He loved the Sunday School and never wanted to miss a Sabbath. O, how God loves little children and takes care of them. Freddie is gone from earth, and is in the hands of Him who does all things well. We should not weep but rejoice in his glory.

"Freddie dear, has gone and left us. On this earth no more to roam; Sped away to God and angels. In that sweet and blissful home. We will miss him in our pleasure, We will miss him in our home, For he was our golden treasure, While upon this earth did roam.

Freddie dear, our hearts are sorrowed, Not because your treasure fondly, But because your own dear presence, Will no more be seen around.

We'll remember you dear Freddie, While upon this earth we stay; You are one we loved so dearly, But no more we have to say.

For the one who plants such treasures, Upon that golden sunny clime, Will take care of father, mother, And their children in His time. Goodbye, Freddie thou'rt in heaven, Where no sorrows ever
